

Cockatiels

If you are wondering about a great first pet parrot to get, look no further. Cockatiels are found in large flocks in Australia. They are a DIMORPHIC species. Meaning you can tell boys from girls by looking at them. Boys have more yellow around their beak and face and girls have less. Their overall natural color is grey body with orange cheeks and yellow around the head or face. Nowadays, there are all kinds of MUTATIONS of cockatiels that alter their colors creating

PIED

CINNAMON

WHITE

YELLOW and more.

--Debbie Goodrich, Parrot Ambassadors

www.parrotambassadors.com